* Exchange represents the difference between the equivalent of the sterling amount converted at 16d. the rupee and at the average rate or at contract and fixed rates. Prior to 1914-15, the practice was to calculate the gain or loss by exchange with reference to the amount of remittance assumed to be made from India to England to meet the net expenditure of the Government of India in England. The gain or loss so calculated was adjusted partly under Revenue and partly under accounts by per contra debt or credit, credit, as the case might be, to the head "Exchange or Remittance Accounts" which all transactions had been recorded during the year. This procedure was abandoned in the year 1914-15 and from that year to the year 1918-19, the gain or loss by exchange on the actual remittance between India and England was shown as a credit or debit under "Exchange" without regard to the amount of net expenditure in England for which remittance from India might have been necessary. In the year 1919-20 in which wide fluctuations on exchange set in, the practice prior to 1914-15 was revived the exchange is now credited partly to revenue and partly to capital the balance being kept under the suspense head "Exchange on Remittance account" against the possibility of opposite results in succeeding years.
